PROMINENT ADVOCATES OF PLAYGROUND PROPOSITION FAVOR BOND ISSUE

The ways and means of raising by district bond issue the required sum for securing the Harmon gift of two thousand dollars toward a permanent playground for children at Ocean Beach will be fully set forth at a community mass meeting to be held in the Congregational Church building on DeFoe street next MONDAY NIGHT, NOV. 3, when everybody interested is most cordially invited to be present.

Prominent speakers and advocates of the playground proposition will be present to give full details of this important community matter and among those especially invited to voice official sanction of the proposed civic improvement are City Manager Fred Rhodes, Edgar F. Hastings, of the Board of Education, and Tam Deering, secretary of the Community Service. They will give explanatory talks and present the playground subject in all its meritorious aspects, while the Mayor and one or two of our city councilmen are also expected to be in attendance. All residents are asked to be there and are especially requested to take an active part in the proceedings.

Volunteer Workers Wanted

To the thousands of enthusiastic LA FOLLETTE-WHEELER voters in San Diego county we now make our final appeal.

We need men and women to work at the polls on November 4, and we need at least eight persons at each polling place.

Will you work? If so, please send your name, address and phone number to your local organization or direct to us for full instructions. We will supply the necessary sample ballots showing how to vote, also badges and banners for the autos: "VOTE FOR LAFOLLETTE AND WHEELER." Call for these at headquarters or write at once.

This hall, at Ninth and G streets, San Diego, has been engaged for election returns, with direct Postal Telegraph wires and operators in the hall. The returns from the east will begin about 7 o'clock and everybody is invited to be present.

A musical program, speeches and some novel features to entertain the audience during the evening, has been provided. Everybody welcome!

El Capitan Project Assures Pure Water

SOME FACTS ABOUT DEVELOPING S. D. RIVER WATER RESOURCES

The San Diego river is about 50 miles in length and is fed by number of branch which rise in the mountains in a northeasterly direction from the city of San Diego and flow in a southwesterly direction to False Bay and the Pacific Ocean. The most northerly of these branches rises near Julian at an elevation of about 4500 feet above sea level and flows southwesterly where it is joined by many tributaries, among which are Dye Canyon creek, Ritchie creek, Cedar creek, Boulder creek, Sand creek, Conejos-King-South Fork and Chocolate creek. The area drained by these streams and lying above the El Capitan dam contains 178 square miles of mountainous country, ranging in elevation from 553 feet at the dam to 6515 feet in the Cuyamaca mountains. This territory has an average rainfall in the lower areas of 17 inches, and increasing with the greater elevation to 44 inches in the Cuyamaca mountains. The heavy rainfall from which this area must derive and store its water run-off, occurs in cycles of 10 and 11-year periods, with past records as follows:

Storage Reservoirs
A flood occurred in the years 1862, 1874, 1895, 1906, 1916, and an intermediate flood in the winter season of 1921-22. In order to store and carry over for use during dry periods these periodical floods, it is necessary in each case to provide large storage reservoirs, first at a height where water can be delivered by gravity to the city without heavy pumping costs; second, it must be stored in a reservoir free from contamination of any source; third, it must be stored at a depth that will provide pure, cold water during summer months; fourth, it must have a relatively small surface area exposed to evaporation; fifth, it should not destroy by its flooded areas thriving communities, valuable improvements to the land, and land which is highly agricultural and producing yearly crops; sixth, it should provide flood waste.

control to all of the many thousands of acres of valuable improved producing areas that lie directly in the path of devastating floods; seventh, it should have a dam site location with rock foundation sufficiently firm and impervious to sustain the pressures brought to it by a concrete dam and be free from leakage caused by the high water pressure of a full storage.

The El Capitan dam and reservoir site will embody all of these very necessary natural qualities and when constructed will deliver by gravity from its own storage reservoir, thru a period of the leanest years of rain fall, 11.6 million gallons of pure, cold mountain water to the city of San Diego; and will provide for an increased population of 116,000 people.

Ideal Dam and Reservoir
On another branch of the San Diego river known as the San Vicente river, lying westerly 10 miles and at an elevation 100 feet lower, is another ideal dam and reservoir site with all of the natural characteristics of the El Capitan and with a storage capacity far in excess of its natural run-off. By connecting these two reservoirs by a 60-inch pipe line, it will be possible to store and deliver to the city of San Diego by gravity, 70 per cent of all of the run-off of the San Diego river, or in excess of 20 million gallons of pure mountain water, which will provide for an additional growth to our city of 200,000 inhabitants.

In choosing the location for the city's water development and the building of the initial dam on the river, it has been the aim of the administration to build now what will become a part of the ultimate development and to add to this structure as the city increases in growth until the maximum amount of water is secured from the San Diego river. When El Capitan and San Vicente are built, there will not be enough excess surface water running past Mission Valley damsite No. 2 to warrant the expense of a dam or the purchase of expensive reservoir lands at that point, hence construction initiated there now would become useless later on and be an economic waste.

Big Realty Rumors Going The Rounds

YOU CAN'T GO WRONG BY BUYING AND BUILDING IN BEACH DISTRICTS

For many weeks Dame Rumor has been busy concerning various big deals in Ocean Beach realty and while some of the statements have been mostly visionary, it can be truly said that there is quite a bit of blaze accountable for a lot of the smoke.

There is much elation over the very probable culmination of the repeated rumor that northern capitalists have acquired a large tract of real estate in the Sunset Cliffs section of Ocean Beach for the purpose of building an immense seaside hotel and apartment house. It is a fact that an option has been held on the property for several months and there is every likelihood that building improvements will be started with the coming of the new year.

Another rumor that may materialize soon is to the effect that "Sunny Jim" Coffroth, the racing magnate, of Tijuana fame, has headed a syndicate for the purchase and improvement of considerable beach property. Then, too, a number of important changes in the business section are on the verge of consummation, but circumstances are such that it is deemed advisable to keep the details under the reportorial hat for the present. However, it can be loudly and widely proclaimed that you can't go wrong by buying and building right now in the beach districts.

And, don't forget to vote and boost for every improvement effecting your community in season and out of season.

Summed up, all in all, with the steady forward movement in beach realty values, directly due to the actual realization of rapid transit by the safe and comfortable high-speed express cars of the San Diego Electric Railway, and also the announced early completion of a considerable portion of the Point Loma Junior High School, there is no end of optimistic satisfaction in the knowledge that the beach sections are now entering upon a glorious era of growth and permanent prosperity.

The BROWN MOUSE

By HERBERT QUICK

(Copyright by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

There was quantity in meats, breads, vegetables—and there was also savor. There was plenty, and there was style. Ask Mrs. Haakon Peterson, who yearned for culture, and had been afraid her children wouldn't get it if Jim Irwin taught them nothing but farming. She will tell you that the dinner—which so many thought of all the time as supper—was just as well served as if it had been in the Chamberlain Hotel in Des Moines, where she had stayed when she went with Haakon to the state convention.

Why shouldn't it have been even better served? It was planned, cooked, served and eaten by people of intelligence and brains, in their own house, as a community affair, and in a community where, if any one should ask you, you are authorized to state that there's as much wealth to the acre as in any strictly farming spot between the two oceans, and where you are perfectly safe—financially—in dropping from a balloon in the dark of the moon, and paying a hundred and fifty dollars an acre for any farm you happen to land on. Why shouldn't things have been well done, when every one worked, not for money, but for the love of the doing, and the love of learning to do in the best way?

Some of these things came out in the speeches following the repast—and some other things, too. It was probably not quite fair for B. B. Hamm to incorporate in his wishes for the welfare and prosperity and so forth of Jim and Jennie that stale one about the troubles of life, but he wanted to see Jennie blush—which as a matter of fact he did; but she failed to grow quite so fiery red as did Jim. But B. B. was a good fellow, and a Trojan in his work for the cause, and the schoolmaster and superintendent of schools forgave him. A remark may be a little broad, and still clean, and B. B. made a clean speech, mainly devoted to the increased value of that farm he at one memorable time was going to sell before Jim's fool notions could be carried out.

Colonel Woodruff made most of the above points which I have scribed from him. He had begun as a reformer late in life, he said, but he would leave it to them if he hadn't worked at the trade steadily after enlistment. He had become a follower of Jim Irwin, because Jim's reform was like dragging the road in front of your own farm—it was reform right at home, and not at the county seat, or Des Moines, or Washington. He had followed Jim Irwin as he had followed Lincoln, and Grant, and Blaine, and McKinley—because Jim Irwin stood for more upward growth for the average American citizen than the colonel could see any prospect of getting from any other choice. And he was proud to live in a country like this, saved and promoted by the great men he had followed, and in a neighborhood served and promoted, if not quite saved, by Jim Irwin. And he was not so sure about it not being saved. Every man and nation had to be saved anew every so often, and the colonel believed that Jim Irwin's new kind of rural school is just as necessary to the salvation of this country. "I am about to close my speech," said the colonel, "and the small service I have been able to give to this nation. I went through the war, neighbors—and am proud of it; but I've done more good in the peaceful service of the last three years than I did in four of fighting and campaigning. That's the way I feel about what we've done in Consolidated District Number One." (Vociferous and long-continued applause.) "Oh, Colonel!" The voice of Angie Talcott rose from away back near the kitchen. "Can Jennie keep on being county superintendent, now she's married?"

A great guffaw of laughter reduced poor Angie to tears; and Jennie had to go over and comfort her. It was all right for her to ask that and they ought not to laugh at Angie, so there! Now, you're all right, and let's talk about the new schoolhouse, and so forth. Jennie brought the smiles back to Angie's face, just in time to hear Jim tell the people amid louder cheers that he had been asked to go into the rural school extension work in two states, and had been offered a fine salary in either place, but that he wasn't even considering these offers. And about that time, the children began to get sleepy and cross and naughty, and the women set in motion agencies which moved the crowd homeward.

TIME IS WASTED

SETTLING CITY'S CLAIM

TO SAN DIEGO RIVER

John F. Forward, Sr., has made public the following statement of especial interest concerning the El Capitan water project:"The opinion was given by our able city attorney a short time since that unless the city exercises its rights on the San Diego river waters as acquired from the government at El Capitan in a short time such rights would be lost."This should arouse the people here to the importance of favorable and emphatic action in the coming El Capitan bond election."It appears to me that sinister influences are at work night and day to jockey the city of San Diego out of its water rights in the San Diego river at El Capitan, and in lieu thereof to bunco the people into a land deal where selfish interests are carrying on for a big clean-up of the taxpayers' money in sale of reservoir lands in another location."Let the people of this city be on their guard. There has been entirely too much time wasted already in settling, once for all, the city's claims to the water of San Diego river at El Capitan, the only reliable and sanitary place for a reservoir for the city's purposes."L. Shapiro, garage, 721 York

LOUIS WILCOX SHOOTS

WILDCAT ON RIDGE

With the coming of winter a pair of wild cats concluded to make their habitat on Point Loma Heights, but there's one less now, owing to the true marksmanship of Louis Wilcox of 4733 Newport avenue. Just about dusk last Friday afternoon he shot and killed a prettily spotted bobcat, weighing about twenty-five pounds.
It had been roaming the crest with its mate for a couple of days and Louis is now having his trophy mounted by a San Diego taxidermist.

POINT LOMA IN "PHOENIXIANA"

"Some twenty emigrants from Texas, two or three with families, have arrived during the week. They have nearly all gone to work on the river. They report four or five hundred more behind with fine stock. One emigrant is said to have brought through a thoroughbred three-year-old colt, for which he was offered and refused $600 at the Colorado river. We don't believe this story, for we doubt very much if there is any one there who has so much money. The Indians at work on the river behave well and shovel with great ardor con amore. There are at present forty-seven at work but fifty more are expected early in the week. They are under the control of Mr. Conroy and Chas. Gage, overseers and their own chiefs, Maunelito and old Tomas. Tents have been pitched for them and with an unlimited supply of beans and the flesh of bulls (a burnt offering they do not despise) they are as happy as circumstances will admit and "doing as well as could be expected." This is about the extent of our news for the week—maybe something else will turn up before the next, in which case the great "Ames" will undoubtedly publish it. Meanwhile, the public are requested to conduct themselves in a virtuous manner and keep their olfactory organs in a state of cleanliness."

In another part of the paper is this paragraph:

"The shanty occupied by the workmen on the San Diego river has been christened 'The Phoenix Hotel' out of compliment to the brevet editor of the San Diego Herald. We visited the establishment the other day and were much pleased with the order and regularity displayed there. We found our old friend Dr. Rollins busily engaged in cooking at an enormous camp fire and 'Phoenix' like he rose from his ashes at our approach."

And still another paragraph of the same issue throws this light on the works:

"The question is daily asked of Phoenix, 'Well, how is the river getting along?' to which that individual diurnally replies, 'Thank you, it is improving'."

October 7, the Herald notes the steady progress of the river work. "At present engaged in constructing the levee and ditching are forty-nine Americans and about a hundred Indians." And on October 22d: "The work on the river has now progressed so far as to make it certain that it will flow through its new channel into False Bay as soon as the rainy season sets in. We visited the work day before yesterday and from the information gathered from Mr. Pool (Derby's assistant) and our own observation, we concluded that the whole will be finished in about ten days."

"We repeat that our citizens are deeply indebted to Lieut. Derby for the assiduity and skill which has been manifested in this, to us, important improvement, and it may be some gratification to him to know that he is considered by persons competent to judge of scientific attainments one of the most accomplished and promising officers in the Topographical Corps."

Then on November 19, the announcement is made that the dam and canal intended to direct the water into its original channel emptying into False Bay was completed last week and the men discharged. "The remainder of the projected work, the construction of the levee across between the two high points below the dam will be delayed until we can get another appropriation from Congress."

The following notice appeared in the Herald January 28, 1854:

MARRIED

In Trinity Church, San Francisco, January 14, by the Rev. Dr. Clark, Lieut. George H. Derby, U. S. Corps of Topographical Engineers, to Mary A. Coons, of St. Louis, Mo. Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party repaired on board the steamer Southerner and after partaking of a magnificent dejeuner a la fourchette, given in honor of the occurrence, by J. Nugent, Esq., and other friends of the party, sailed at 4 p. m. for San Diego."

Editor Ames speaks of all sorts of trivial happenings, but of this, the chief event in his nearest friend's life, not a word! "Phoenix" is not heard from again, but "Squibbobs"—the name Derby had discontinued using, owing to its having been borrowed by some unoriginal scribbler—appears in a note of February 4, 1854:

"Squibbobs, in addition to his merit as a writer, is a clever artist. He returned to San Francisco the other day and made rather an eccentric announcement of the fact on the bulletin at the Oriental Hotel. First he drew a correct portrait of himself and called it 'Squibb's likeness' and under this he sketched the back view of a man and under that wrote 'Squibb's back again'. It is said TWO—O B NEWS he fainted after perpetration of this awful pun."

"The efficiency of the works constructed for turning the San Diego River," says the last of these river comments on February 18, 1854, "has been amply tested during the past week by the freshet occasioned by the late rains bringing a wide torrent down the mission valley, which, meeting the dam, glided off into the canal provided for it through the sand plain dividing the two bays. The velocity of the current impelled by the pressure of such a vast body of water behind it has had some effect in washing the banks of the canal but not to any considerable extent, while the wood and earth work of the dam across the river remains intact, not having been disturbed in the slightest degree."

The word "promising" a few paragraphs back, gives the key to all Derby's joyous exploits here. He was young in 1854. He was full of mental and physical energy. He should have lived to see the young West that he knew grow into its maturity. The fact is he had but a few years to live. After finishing the river improvement here, he undertook the survey of the U. S. land in San Diego county; and was engaged for a short time in other survey work on the coast. While in the south, working on the construction of a lighthouse he suffered sunstroke and died not long after.

MANAGER BENBOUGH

MAKES IMPROVEMENT AT O. B. DANCE PAVILION

The interior of the Ocean Beach Pavilion has been greatly improved by Manager W. E. Benbough through the addition of an attractive row of loges extending the entire length of one side of the large hall. The boxes are divided by handsome green curtains, trimmed in gold, and swinging doors give easy entrance. The loges are ten in number with a total seating capacity of over one hundred. Manager Benbough announces that election returns will be shown on the pavilion screen next Tuesday night.

fireplace?—sat Jim and Jennie. They had been together for a week now—this being their homecoming—and had only begun to get really happy.

Jim sat looking into the fire, oblivious of it. When Jennie spoke, her voice seemed to emanate from Jim's shirt front.

"Did you hear," said she, "what Angle Talcott asked?"

"M'h'm," said Jim.

"Well," said Jennie, "now that I'm married can I go on being county superintendent?"

There was a long silence.

"Would you like to?" asked Jim.

"Kind of," said Jennie; "if I knew enough about things to do anything worth while; but I'm afraid that by rising to my full height I shall always just fall to be able to see over anything."

"You've done more for the schools of the county," said Jim, "in the last year than any other county superintendent has ever done."

"And we shall need the money so like—so like the dickens," was Jennie's rejoinder.

"Oh, not so badly," laughed Jim, "except for the first year. I'll have this little farm paying as much as some quarter sections when we get squared about. Why, we can make a living on this school farm, Jennie—or I'm not fit to be the head of the school."

There was another silence, during which Jennie took down her hair, and wound it around Jim's neck.

"It will settle itself one of these days anyhow," said he at last. "There's enough to do for both of us right here."

"But they won't pay me," she protested.

"They don't pay the ministers' wives," said Jim, "and yet, the ministers with the right sort of wives are always the best paid. I guess you'll be in the bill, Jennie."

Jim walked to the open window and looked out over the still landscape. Down in the little meadow grew the dreaming trees, their round crowns rising as from a sea not quite to the

KEEPING WELL

OPENING DEAF EARS

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

THE radio is the wonder of the present. It has practically annihilated space. It has increased a speaker's audience far beyond the capacity of any building on earth. It is estimated that over a million American citizens heard President Coolidge in his address before congress last December. This was probably the largest audience which has ever listened to one man. Yet it is small compared to what the audiences of the future may be. In a few years radios will be as common as telephones.

But the radio has done something else that is greater than annihilating distance or making all of our citizens one vast audience. It has opened the ears of the deaf. Not all deaf persons can hear the radio, but some so deaf that they have not heard the human voice for years are able to hear over the radio with perfect ease. The New York League for the Hard of Hearing is so enthusiastic over the radio that it has equipped its clubrooms with radio apparatus carrying 24 head sets. Warren Pond, the president of the New York league, writing in the Volta Review, a magazine for the deaf, says, "When my radio was installed and, sitting in my home, I heard clearly the notes of a song, the tears came to my eyes. After living in silent land for 45 years, the spell was broken and I found a new heaven and a new earth."

Think what this means to the man or woman whose ability to hear has practically disappeared, to whom not only the human voice but all forms of music are forever silent. What is it that makes it possible for the ear, deaf to ordinary sounds, to respond to radio waves? Is there something about the radio wave that is different from the ordinary sound wave and that produces a vibration in the ear that is dead to ordinary sounds? We do not know, but we do know that the development of the radio and its widespread use has brought happiness to thousands of men and women who have been cut off from the world of sound for years. No one could anticipate that such a miracle would take place. The unexpected results of science are sometimes the most marvelous.

level of the bungalow, their thrifty leaves glistening in the moonlight. Across the pretty bridge lay the silent little campus with its Twentieth century temple facing its chief priest. It was all good, without and within.

He went across the hall to bid his mother good night. She clung to him convulsively, and they had their own five minutes which arranged matters for these two silent natures on the new basis forever. Jennie was in white before the mantel when he returned, smiling at the inscription thereon:

"Let Us Cease Thinking So Much of Agricultural Education, and Devote Ourselves to Educational Agriculture. So Will the Nation Be Made Strong."

"Why didn't you put it in Latin?" she inquired. "It would have had so much more distinction."

"I wanted it to have meaning instead," said Jim. "And besides, nobody who was at hand was quite sure how to turn the Latin phrase. Are you?"

Jennie leaned forward with her elbows on her knees, and studied it.

"I believe I could," said she, "without any pony. But after all, I like it better as it is. I like everything, Jim—everything!"
